"I loved my job at Aurora Health Care," says Phyllis Peck. For 10 years before retirement, Phyllis worked in information services developing and teaching personal computer classes. She enjoyed the people and her work, but when Phyllis turned 65, it was time to pursue a new goal.

Her dream is to publish a novel. Writing isn't new to her. She has already co-authored five successful books on word processing and office automation, including the first ever published in the United States. To write the novel, Phyllis needs solid blocks of creative time, something her demanding job and the responsibilities of being a homeowner didn't permit.

Retiring in 1993 and wanting to be free of owning a house, Phyllis researched retirement living options for three years. This past spring, she was almost ready to commit to a retirement community, "when the hand of fate intervened," says Phyllis.

Phyllis was in the midst of a three-day trial stay just before signing on the dotted line, when she went back to her house to host her monthly sheepshead card party. "I was relaxing with the newspaper and waiting for my guests, when an article about Aurora's affiliation with Friendship Village literally jumped out at me," she says.

"I was so excited! I'd always wished that Aurora had a..."
retirement community,” explains Phyllis. “It seems like such a natural connection with the other facilities. It’s more convenient and cost-effective for me to be in an Aurora facility that will have a pharmacy and could potentially have a primary care clinic. It was just fate that I happened to be home to read that article before I bought into the other retirement community.”

While Phyllis is healthy and active at age 68, she was attracted to the life care concept offered by Friendship Village. “I wanted peace of mind for myself and my three sons,” she explains. Developed for older adults, life care involves a continuum of living in one facility: independent apartment living, assisted living and temporary or permanent 24-hour skilled care.

“I’m widowed and very independent, but at my age I have to be realistic. I don’t ever want to be a burden to my children. With life care, I know I’ll always be taken care of, and I’ll never have to move again.”

Phyllis moved into her cozy, one-bedroom apartment at Friendship Village in June. In her first two days, more than 20 neighbors stopped by to welcome her and to invite her to Village activities and dinner in the dining room.

“Friendship Village is a good name for this place,” says Phyllis. “I am so impressed with the genuine friendliness of the residents and staff.”

Phyllis now enjoys solid blocks of creative time at her computer. She’s also explored the Village’s social activities and convenient services such as the beauty shop, bank, chapel and grocery store. In August, Phyllis showed off her new home to her bridge club—the apartment she chose had been carefully measured to fit two card tables!

When asked if she has a message for her friends at Aurora, Phyllis has a warm smile and a ready answer. “Tell them I miss them, but I really enjoy being retired.”

The Visiting Nurse Association of Wisconsin (VNA) has recently implemented the Clinical Link computer system. Clinical Link is helping the VNA make the difficult transition from keeping patient records on paper to computerization.

Paul Marino, RN, is one of more than 150 VNA nurses using the Clinical Link system. "The laptop gives me more time for patient care because I don't have to go into the office to deliver or pick up paper work. I also know I have complete, up-to-date information available on my patients which is very helpful in providing quality patient care and continuity of care. My overall evaluation of the system is very positive," says Paul.

The VNA of Wisconsin is one of only a small number of home care agencies in the country that have completely computerized patient records. When asked what motivated the VNA to embrace this new technology, Mary Beth Marciniak, a member of the Clinical Link support team, says, "We had a number of key goals and efficiency was certainly one of them. We felt we could improve the quality of care we were providing to patients if we had the most recent patient information readily available."

Since the implementation of this system one year ago, all of the full-time staff and most of the part-time staff from the VNA's Milwaukee office have been trained and are entering patient records right into their laptop computers.

Leslie Gumpert, another member of the Clinical Link support team, says, "Clinical Link has really improved our ability to access information." A nurse can dial into the office on a regular phone line and immediately retrieve the needed patient information, including such important data as current medications, health care plans, and physician reports.

The VNA anticipates several important upgrades which will make the software more flexible and efficient. In addition, the VNA hopes to eventually use laptops to communicate directly with physicians and other Aurora health professionals through WHIN (Wisconsin Health Information Network).

"This computerization has enabled us to provide better patient care - and it will continue to do so as the technology improves. We are very excited to be on the cutting edge of this new technology in home care," says MaryBeth.

Celebrating 25 years of leadership in family therapy

Family Service of Milwaukee’s Family Therapy Training Institute (FTTI) began in the early 70’s as an inservice program to train staff in Family Systems Therapy, then a groundbreaking treatment model. Since then, FTTI has grown and flourished, providing hundreds of marriage and family therapists with advanced skills and clinical experience needed to help resolve some of the community’s most challenging problems.

In celebrating FTTI’s 25th anniversary, Family Service president and co-founder of FTTI, David Hoffman says, “Family Therapy Training Institute continues to be a vital part of our vision of a nurturing community of healthy families, safe neighborhoods and successful schools.”

Family Service of Milwaukee is a component of Alternative Delivery and Community Programs (ADCP) within the Aurora system.

Get Immunized!

Experts recommend that you get immunized in the fall, long enough before the winter flu season so that your body can build up its own natural defenses.

September, October, and November are prime immunization months. Check your local Aurora facility to see when flu immunizations are being offered.

Aurora’s Printing Services sets new record

On July 23, 1997, Printing Services made 132,000 impressions (printed copies) in a single shift. This breaks their last record by 6,000. This achievement is a result of their continuous quality improvement effort to increase efficiency and productivity. The printing services department produces forms, brochures, reports, booklets and a variety of other printed materials for facilities and programs throughout Aurora Health Care.

If your department has reached an important milestone or has an achievement to share, contact Teamworks.
