Many low-income working people in Washington County go without health care services because they can't afford them. Now children and adults who are unable to pay for care can seek help at a free clinic that opened earlier this year at Hartford Memorial Hospital.

The clinic is the second in Washington County operated by Donated Health Care Services Inc., a volunteer organization that provides free health care to needy people. The clinic sees patients two Tuesday evenings a month for short-term basic health care needs. In addition, appropriate treatment, screenings, education and referrals are provided. Qualified patients have access through referrals and a voucher system to a network of hospitals, clinics, dentists, chiropractors, pharmacies and eye care specialists.

"The program was developed by the community to serve the people," explains Diane Reif, RN, nursing outreach and ICU coordinator at Hartford Memorial. "Everyone is contributing in a different way and everyone is really appreciated and needed."

The clinic is staffed entirely by volunteers. Hartford Memorial provides the space for registration, examination and consultation rent-free.

"This effort brings people together to serve a humanitarian need in the community," explains Loretta Klassen, director-patient care services at Hartford Memorial and a Donated Health board member. Loretta has provided administrative leadership for this project at the hospital.

The clinic and vouchers are possible because of ongoing community fundraising and volunteer efforts. Donated Health began as a formal non-profit organization after retired General Clinic of West Bend physician James Albrecht successfully rallied local support for the idea. Donated Health's board of directors includes members from both Washington County hospitals, the county's department of social services, Bank One and other health professionals and volunteers.
Safety is serious for climbers.

Adventure Rock is a new climbing center designed solely for rock climbing. The walls are 35 feet from floor to ceiling and there's more than 9,500 square feet of climbing surface. Some of the climbing surface includes overhangs that lean back toward the floor to really challenge climbers. The owners say it's the tallest climbing gym in the state.

Megan says the essential equipment a person needs to get into climbing are special climbing shoes, a rope and a bag of chalk to keep your hands dry. Adventure Rock rents all essential climbing equipment to get started.

The Sports Medicine Institute also provides free injury evaluations by appointment at the following locations: 1218 W. Kilbourn Ave., suite 305; 19601 W. Bluemound Rd. and 12121 N. Corporate Pky, suite 350.

April is National Occupational Therapy Month
During April, observances in Aurora facilities will offer information on the role occupational therapists (OTRs) and certified occupational therapy assistants (COTAs) play in helping people handle "skills for the job of living," this year's theme for National OT Month. Each person's daily life is made up of a variety of activities in the "job of living" — from developing as a newborn through learning, working and enjoying life as an adult. Health problems can seriously interfere with skills needed in the job of living. This year's theme for National OT Month.
